This semester I took a "personality type "test and the result came out as ENFJ personality type, who happen to be natural leaders, full of passion and charisma. Forming around two percent of the world's population, these personalities are often politicians, coaches and teachers, who reach out to others and inspire them to achieve their goals and do well in the world. With an innate confidence that generates influence, the ENFJ personality type are very proud and happy to guide others to work together to improve themselves and their community.

Most characteristics of ENFJ personality type matches mine so base on this I have come to understand what to focus on and planning on how to get to the goals.
